Why a course on CSE?

We are aware that teachers and educators often find it challenging to discuss sexuality related issues in classrooms and school settings. This is especially so given they have little training, preparation or scope to explore their own doubts and feelings about gender, sex, sexuality.

This eLearning course aims to fill this gap created by the lack of teacher training on CSE and equip educators with skills to engage with sexual and reproductive health issues within schools and institutions. It provides exposure to various concepts such as CSE, sexuality, gender and on topics such as body image, technology and its influence on young people, harassment of teachers and students, etc., and provides a space for self-reflection and values clarification.

The course is adapted from The Orange Book, a workbook developed by TARSHI in 2010, aimed at helping teachers provide CSE with confidence and ease.

What does the eLearning course include?

The eLearning course is in English, and incorporates dynamic exercises and external resources such as videos, relevant eMagazine and online newspaper articles, scholarly and academic reports combined with TARSHI's content.

Real life stories, case studies, academic articles and multimedia resources have been woven into core content to address sensitive and challenging issues in inventive and personalised ways.

Who is this course for?

As the name suggests, this course is especially designed for teachers, academics, educationists, and any professionals working with schools, colleges, institutions and universities.

What is the structure of the course?

The course has six modules and each module has 3-4 chapters. Each chapter has exercises that begin with basic concepts and cover more complex issues, requiring participants to reflect upon related issues from their workplace and professional experience.
